The Swedish Armed Forces chooses Capgemini to improve logistics, personnel and financial management

Stockholm, August 28 2024 – Capgemini today announced that the Swedish Armed Forces has signed a new multi-year framework agreement with Capgemini as one of three suppliers for SAP consulting services. As part of the agreement, Capgemini will ensure continuity, competence and quality in operational management systems, for example in managing logistics, personnel and finances. Capgemini was selected based on the competency of its team, its track record in delivering such projects and its proven ability to work in close collaboration to achieve success, in a cost-efficient way.

As part of the framework agreement, Capgemini's SAP experts will continuously support the Armed Forces by reinforcing both resource and project assignments through all phases of the project life cycle.

"We are pleased to work with the Swedish Armed Forces and we are very proud that they continue to show confidence in Capgemini's ability to support its digital transformation initiative. We look forward to continuing our development journey together with the Swedish Armed Forces to deliver increased operational value," says Caroline Segerstéen Runervik, Head of Nordics at Capgemini.

The Swedish Armed Forces' SAP system, called PRIO, currently has 25,000 users and is an operational management system for managing logistics, personnel and finances, among other things. Development of the integrated system is being carried out to enable increased operational capability and to simplify cooperation with allies.
